Browser Version Numbers

Web site browsers, like most software, have different version numbers. As upgrades are made to the browser, the version number is changed to reflect the upgrade. The higher the version number, the newer the browser. Determining what browser version you are using is as important as knowing what kind of browser you have. Newer browser versions will allow you to access more features, and work more reliably on many Web sites.

Determining Your Browser’s Version Number

If you are using a Windows operating system, you can determine what browser version you are currently using by following the steps:

Select “About [browser name]...” under the “Help” menu at the top of your browser screen.
