Travis Gerrits, RBC Olympian

One of the leaders of the “Eh Team”, aerialist Travis first got a taste of the flips he would be doing later in his career when he was enrolled in gymnastics at the age of two. By the age of six, Travis was taking skiing lessons and also transferring his gymnastics skills to the trampoline – competing at the national level. By the time he was 14, Travis had already been named to the national team and given the special honour of being a forerunner at the 2010 Olympic Winter Games in Vancouver. Travis made his Olympic debut in 2014 in Sochi and finished seventh overall. Outside freestyle skiing, Travis is a hardworking student currently completing courses at Stanford University. He also does a lot public speaking at schools and volunteers his time in the community. When he’s not competing on the hills, Travis can be found golfing, fly-fishing and hanging out with his three English bulldogs.
